Where: Patrick Moore Gallery
2233 South 700 East, Salt Lake City

The Utah Watercolor Society challenged its members to get “Inspired by a Book” for the annual fall member exhibition. The results demonstrate the diversity of the artists who make up the society and the diversity of their reading interests. From Gordon B. Hinkley to J. K. Rowling, and from “The Secret Garden” to “Home Improvement 1-2-3,” an interesting variety of books inspired the 35 artists whose work was accepted into the juried exhibition.

The theme itself was inspired by the annual Book Festival sponsored by the Utah Humanities Council, which coincides with the exhibit. Visit <http://www.utahhumanities.org/BookFestival.htm> for a list of events.

Paintings for the exhibition were selected from more than 100 entries by nationally renowned watercolorist Joyce Washor. The exhibit will fill the main gallery at Patrick Moore Gallery and spill into the hallway and adjoining room. Sixty paintings will be exhibited Oct. 15 – Nov. 7, with receptions on Oct. 15, 6-9 for award presentations, and on Oct. 16, 6-9, during Gallery Stroll.
