Good times in Blanding...

In the August 12th edition of the Panorama we had an article entitled "Japanese Man found Friendship and Safety in Home of Blanding Family during WWII". Risa Shimoda, daughter of Midori Shimoda, came to Blanding to visit with the Hurst family who gave her father safe harbor during WWII. Risa sent this photo of her and Devon Hurst having a little fun during a sightseeing during her trip to Blanding with her thanks to everyone for their hospitality during her visit. courtesy photo

EOC presents
"The Maya of Guatemala: Losing Cultural Identity in a Rapidly Changing World"

The Edge of the Cedars State Park Museum is delighted to announce the first in a series of programs for the fall season. Everyone is invited to join us on Thursday evening, September 9th at 6:30 PM for a special presentation by photographer and former archaeologist, Michael Plyler.

Michael Plyler has been photographing the Maya of Guatemala since 1982 and has made more than 15 trips to Guatemala in an effort to record his vision of these shy, retiring people.

In his slide-illustrated presentation, Plyler examines the cultural erosion of the highland Maya of Guatemala, descendants of the pyramid-builders of such classic Maya sites as Tikal, Palenque, Caracol, and others. The Maya are extraordinary for many reasons. A continuously existing culture for 4,500 years, they were the first to develop the mathematical concept of zero. Their accurate astronomical measurements allowed them to create a calendar projected 30,000 years into the future. Additionally, they invented the corbelled arch, had the most advanced writing system in the western hemisphere and some of the most admired weaving. Their empire lasted roughly six times as long as the Roman Empire.

This program will recap their exceptional accomplishments and cultural history before examining their collisions with European culture, their oppression at the hands of a series of right-wing dictators from the 1950s through the 1990s, and today's cultural erosion accelerated by their exposure to rampant consumerism and tourism. Audience discussion will focus on what is lost when ancient cultures are eroded, as is happening with the Maya.

This slide-illustrated lecture reveals the glory of the Maya past and places them in the present-day context. Michael will also show examples of their beautiful weavings, the pinnacle of their post-Columbian artistic achievement, as well as several of Plyler's portraits of the People.

This free presentation is generously funded by the Utah Humanities Council Public Square programming. We hope that you'll take advantage of these UHC presentations, as the funding enables the museum to bring quality speakers to Blanding. So, remember to circle September 9th on your calendar and we'll see you Thursday evening at The Edge!
