Prehistoric rock art on exhibit at DSC

ST. GEORGE — Dixie State College of Utah is sponsoring The Art in Rock Art, a Utah Arts Council Traveling Exhibition that features 24 photographs by Utah State University professor Craig Law, chronicling

Utah's prehistoric rock art. At the DSC Val A. Browning Library daily through Nov. 2, these photographs are a small selection of images included in a greater documentary project called the BCS Project run by Law and project director, David Sucec.

Utah is home to numerous world-class prehistoric rock art sites. This artwork provides a record of Utah and North America's cultural history; yet, these sites are virtually unprotected.

To date, many sites have been seriously compromised by vandalism, others by accelerated aging and weathering. In 1991, the Barrier Canyon Style rock art Project was started by Law and Sucec in response to growing alarm over this deterioration. Since incorporation, the BCS Project has sought to document any and all known sites of prehistoric Barrier Canyon rock art in Utah before it is lost. As of 2001, the project has photographed 212 sites. The complete documentation, without specific locations of sites, will be housed in the Special Collections Division of the Marriott Library at the University of Utah as a record and resource for scholars and the public in the study of the Barrier Canyon style and Utah prehistoric rock art.

A native of Logan, Law served as project photographer and is the chairman of the art department at Utah State University. Law has received numerous awards and honors. His work is in many private and public collections including the Utah Museum of Fine Arts and the Utah State Collection. Law is currently represented by Phillips Gallery in Salt Lake City.

Sucec, who was the BCS project director, is a visual artist, scholar, independent curator and teacher who resides in Salt Lake City. In 1991, Sucec was awarded a Utah Humanities Council Research Fellowship to initiate the BCS project.

The Art in Rock Art exhibit will be open to the public Monday through Thursday from 7:30 a.m. through 11:45 p.m., Fridays from 7:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m., Saturdays from noon to 6:45 p.m. and Sundays from 3 to 9:45 p.m. For information on viewing the exhibition, call Ellen Bonadurer at the DSC Browning library at 652-7713 or visit www.utahtravelingexhibits.org.

Weekend activities at park announced

IVINS — Visit Snow Canyon State Park with your family on Friday and Saturday and participate in one of several activities.

On Friday and Saturday at 5 p.m. join park staff for a hike to Johnson Canyon and Johnson Arch. Learn more about the natural history of the area as you traverse lava flows and a desert scrub community on this ranger-led, two-mile hike.

On Saturday at 10 a.m., join Ann McLuckie, wildlife biologist, for "Monsters in the Desert." Gila monsters are one of the most mysterious and endangered creatures of Southwest Utah. McLuckie will discuss the biology of these fascinating lizards. Find out how Gila monsters are studied using radio-telemetry.

Space is limited and registration is required. All programs are free and open to the public. To request more information, register for a program or receive a list of upcoming activities call 628-2255.
