Water is an essential component of life on our planet – environmentally, culturally, and historically. What role does water play in your life?

Join us in 2020-2021 for exhibitions, events, and a deep dive into the expansive topic of water.

Think Water Utah, presented by Utah Humanities and its partners, is a statewide collaboration and conversation on the critical topic of water.

Water|Ways and H2O Today are traveling exhibitions created by the Smithsonian Institution and brought to you by Utah Humanities.

Water is life. It forms our world and our lives. It allows us to travel and blocks our paths. It determines where we live and work and what we eat and drink. An essential natural resource that we struggle to access and control, water shapes human culture—our ways of life. Dive into Water|Ways and share your water story!

Explore the beauty and essential nature of water, our planet’s lifeblood. H2O Today examines the diversity and challenges of our global water sources and promotes conversation, creativity, and innovation through art, science and technology.

Come learn how water unites us and divides us in our communities, our cultures, and our future. Visit Water|Ways and H2O Today, along with community exhibitions and events all around Utah in 2020-2021!
