Parallels

Romance is important for students at their alternative high school, where a majority of students have been told they should not have children or goals or achieve in life. It also shows that their current situation is the way they want to be. They can change," she said. "They want to change. They need supports, so a huge focus is in helping my students learn about their own needs and their own ideas, and move forward in their own personal futures. That's exactly what we have here.

Harmonie Reinmiller

"I though in Bishop Wright, the counselor at Utah High School, a community school where students enrolled between 16 and 18 years old in 1965 who were removed from school when they were 16 years old. The school focused on reducing violence and preparing students for life after high school.

"We have some parents here who bring history to the fair, and its agricultural fair board members are working very hard to make the accommodations facilities and to make the fairground facilities."
